

Message from the Principal

Dear Fellow Travelers, Greetings from Vancouver School of Theology

Each of us is making our way on a journey all our own. The story which we are writing that expresses the meaning of us is a story we alone can write. By our choices and our actions we become known to each other and to ourselves. The immensity and possibility of the project before us, the project of our own becoming can be overwhelming as surely as it is inviting. And so we are given the gift of each other, companions on the way, bread for the journey. In the context of the VST environment, we summon each other to the limits of our understanding and the depth of our knowing. In the context of critical thinking, spiritual exploration and the practice of living, new windows are opened on the imagination we have for our own lives and for the way of reconciliation God intends for this world.

There is a wisdom saying which holds the following: when the learner is ready, the teacher will appear. If the questing which is uniquely yours might find a home in this school, with this community of seekers, you are welcome. Come journey with us.

Blessings and Peace,
